Title	Author(s)	Description	Publishing / website
Meaning Reconstruction & the Experience of Loss	Neimeyer, editor American Psychological Association	Neimeyer and others regard grief as part of the spectrum of losses which challenge us as humans, others of which may include divorce or childhood trauma or abuse. These workers understand that ongoing bonds with the child or person who has died not only do occur anyhow but may actually increase the ability to "live well"; and look at processes or structures which increase our ability to integrate the painful experience/s into a full and coherent experience of being.	Fishpond
Continuing Bonds: New Understandings of Grief	Edited by Dennis Kloss, Phylliss Silverman, Steven Nickman	The dominant twentieth-century model holds that the function of grief and mourning is to cut bonds with the deceased, thereby freeing the survivor to reinvest in new relationships in the present. The book presents data to demonstrate that the healthy resolution of grief enables one to maintain a continuing bond with the deceased. Such bonds are not denial; the deceased can provide resources for enriched functioning in the present.	GriefNet
Counselling for Loss and Life Changes		List of useful websites and articles covering a range of topics on grieving.	www.counselingforloss.com

When Mum Went	Tess Rowley and Rhiannon McLay (Illustrator)	When children's mothers are imprisoned, the children are likely to suffer far greater disruption to their lives than if their father is imprisoned. The children may have to adapt to a new primary carer, move house and change schools. It can also mean the loss of relationships with extended family and friends, or the loss of pets. This book gives children a story that they can relate to their own situation. It explains prison routines and offers accurate and honest information about prison life, therefore promoting tolerance and understanding.	www.innovativeresources.org

Forever and ever	Jenny Sharp	Special friends aren't perfect - like when they pee and puke where they shouldn't. - but we love them anyway! But what happens when your special friend goes away and you haven't told her how you feel? A simple yet beautifully told tale of love and friendship for 4-8year olds.	One Goat Creative Distributors www.onegoatcreative.com.au
Heaven	Nicholas Allan	Although the "D" word is never mentioned death is indeed the subject of this quirky, picture book. Dill and Lily discuss heaven: she sees it as a sort of candy-and-carnival free-for-all; for Dill, it's full of bones and lampposts and "whiffy things to smell on the ground." Allan's lighthearted approach to a subject usually treated with great somberness will likely provoke a wide range of responses, with some applauding his whimsy, others decrying his irreverence and still others questioning the story's emotional truth. All ages.	Amazon
I'll Always Love you	Hans Wilhelm	In this gentle, moving story, Elfie, a dachshund, and her special boy progress happily through life together. One morning Elfie does not wake up. The family grieves and buries her. The watercolor illustrations, tender and warm in color and mood, suit the simple text perfectly.	Fishpond
We Love Them	Martin Waddell Illustrated by Barbara Firth	3+. A gentle story about the death of an aged dog, Ben.	Amazon
When Pets Die It's Alright to Grieve	Doris Zagdanski	The grief for a pet is explained in a commonsense, practical and very sensitive way. Just what you need when your pet companion has died and it seems that no-one understands. The author explains that it is not unusual to feel overwhelming grief at the loss of a pet and gives help and advice on how to cope.	Fishpond

Worries
Little Mouse's Big Book of Fears	Emily Gravette	Kindergarten-Grade 4—A tiny mouse and his gigantic fears collide in this humorous creation. This handbook dramatically states, "A fear faced is a fear defeated," and encourages the fainthearted to conquer their fright through writing, drawing, and collage.	Amazon
The Huge Bag of Worries	Virginia Ironside	It is funny and helpful, not didactic or worrying. It describes how it feels to have worries, to have trouble talking about them, and how to diminish the worries. At the age when children begin to have worries (4, 5 and certainly later as well) this book is a good starting point for talking about them.	Amazon
The Worry Tree	Marianne Musgrove	Grade 3–5. After a fight with her sister, Juliet's parents decide that she needs her own room. Juliet's new bedroom, was her Nana's bedroom when she was about 10 years old. Behind the old wallpaper, Juliet finds her grandmother's "worry tree." where Nana explains that each of the animals sitting in the tree can be trusted to take care of one of Juliet's various concerns while she is sleeping. Musgrove gives a realistic picture of an ordinary family dealing with a variety of common problems, such as sibling rivalry, incompatibility, and parental aging. The book's one flaw is the girl's solution to the school bully, which isn't very realistic. The author has, however, provided a unique solution for Juliet's worries.	Amazon
