

Seeing our children through God's eyes

23 – 26 JULY 2018
REV DR JAMES MCEVOY

Recent reflection in sociology, psychology and theology has led to a new appreciation of the meaning of childhood.

Because of God's eternal love, we see children's lives as valuable in themselves, and not simply as a step toward adulthood. They reveal the eternal love of God in a special way of their own.

This series of seminars in the Diocese of Maitland-Newcastle will explore the liberating view of childhood and children's lives found in theological tradition. The seminars are aimed at educators at early childhood, primary and secondary levels, as well as catechists, parish teams, parishioners and diocesan staff.

Rev Dr McEvoy's theological interests are grounded in a theological and philosophical anthropology derived from the works of Karl Rahner and the Canadian philosopher Charles Taylor. He is Australia's leading exponent of a theology of childhood which aims to foreground theologically informed understandings of the dignity of children, acknowledging them as competent and accomplished beings. His work is particularly relevant for those seeking to develop and advance appropriate cultures for the care of children.

A senior lecturer in the ACU Faculty of Theology and Philosophy, Rev Dr McEvoy lectures in systematic theology and is a priest of the Archdiocese of Adelaide.
